The very first place that I can remember was a large pleasant meadow. To start with, I lived on my mother`s milk. But as soon as I could eat the grass, she had to go out to work, and she came home in the evening. There were six young colts in the meadow besides me. We had great fun galloping around, although they would sometimes bite and kick. My mother was a wise old horse. Her name was Dutchess, but our master often called her Pet. As I grew older, I grew handsome. I had one white foot and a pretty white star on my forehead. My black coat grew fine and soft. When I was ready to leave home, my mother said to me, “I hope you will fall into good hands, but a horse never knows who may buy him, or who may drive him. Some men are kind and thoughtful, like our master. Others can be cruel. Remember, do your best whatever happens, and keep your good name”/

7. There were six young colts at all.
